ILO Future of Work Centenary Initiative Conference in Dublin Castle, May 12th, 2017

Nicolas Niemtchinow
Assistant Director General
International Labour Organization
How this might affect our work?

Transforming work and production

Artificial intelligence, digitalization, blurred lines work/private life, fragmented supply chains, horizontal organizational designs, big data

Creating and/or eliminating jobs

Automation, polarization of jobs, new required labour skills, growing job demand, youth and female inclusion

Changing labour relations

Non-standard forms of employment, gig-economy, social protection reforms, increasing labour mobility

How do workers and enterprises adapt?

How to preserve decent jobs?

How to manage or regulate these changes?

How do we successfully educate new workers?
ILO’s Future of Work Initiative: Overarching goals

- Generating a better and shared understanding of the forces transforming the world of work, its implications for governments, workers, and the social contract.
- Generate a better and shared understanding of the forces transforming the world of work and their implications;
- identify the key questions and challenges posed by the ongoing changes;
- propose policy recommendations to shape the Future of work we want; Positioning the ILO as the global parliament for labour, enhancing social dialogue to align its mandate for social justice with the UN 2030 Sustainable Development Agenda.
FoW Global Discussion: 3 Stages of the ILO’s Centenary Initiative

2016
National Dialogues on the FoW

2017
High Level Global Commission

2018

2019
108th International Labour Conference

Centenary Conversations
Work and society
Organization of work and production
Decent jobs for all
Labour Governance

National Reports
Report and recommendations
Possible Centenary Declaration

6-7 April, 2017
The Future of Work We Want: A Global Dialogue
First stage of the FoW Initiative:
Broad and dynamic participation
for a global debate across the globe

168/188 ILO Member states are taking part of the Initiative

110 countries have participated to a National or Regional Dialogue
Today with you in Dublin

80 National and Regional reports received

National dialogues will be completed by summer 2017
THANK YOU

Contact:
www.ilo.org/futureofwork
futureofwork@ilo.org

Recent Publications:
Issue Note 1
Issue Note 2
Issue Note 3
Issue Note 4